

How should participants that have moved house shortly after joining an operation be recorded? (regarding the indicator on “living in rural areas”)

The common output indicator on participants living in rural areas refers to the situation of participants at the date they start the operation. The fact that a participant relocates to another area (rural or not) during an operation is not relevant to this indicator and does not have to be recorded for monitoring purposes (see page 61 of Annex D of the Practical guidance, which has a specific note on this).
